NATIONAL NAVAL MEDICAL CENTER

present National Naval Medical Center. Surrounding the Center tower and adjacent to the Center group of buildings, on the 232 acre landscaped tract, are located the buildings and facilities comprising the six component commands of the Naval Medical Center.

Commissioning of the present Naval Medical Center on February 5, 1942, fulfilled a dream of the late President Franklin Delano Roosevelt, who submitted an original sketch of the design and who, on Armistice Day 1940, laid the cornerstone of the Naval Medical Center in the presence of the then Secretary of the Navy and other distinguished guests, including the Surgeons General of the Army, Navy and Public Health Service.

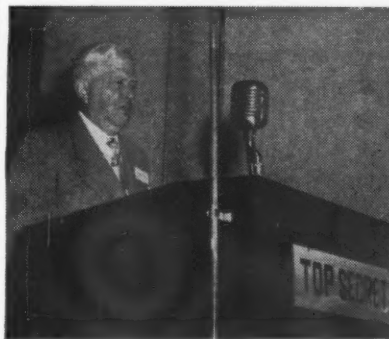

As the architecture differs from that of the former Naval Medical Center located at 23rd and E Streets, N.W., in buildings originally designed for the old Naval Observatory, so does the service and logistic support for the Armed Forces afforded by the present day Naval Medical Center.

The U. S. Naval Hospital is a fully equipped modern facility which functions as a diagnostic, treatment and training center. This hospital has been especially designated as a treatment center for neurosurgery, plastic surgery and oncology. An active and vigorous residency and intern training program is carried out.

The U. S. Naval Medical School is fundamentally a postgraduate institution training medical officers and hospital corpsmen in specialties for service afloat (Please turn to Page 1485)

*Admiral Stone assumed command of the Center on 20 June 1953 relieving Rear Adm. Bertram Groesbeck, Jr. (MC), USN, who was placed on the retired list as of that date. Admiral Stone comes to the Center from the Bureau of Medicine and Surgery where he served from 10 March 1952 as Assistant Chief of Bureau for personnel and professional operations. The Center is not an entirely new duty station for Admiral Stone inasmuch as he served as Commanding Officer of a component command, the U. S. Naval Hospital, from 1946 to 1948. Rear Admiral Stone is a Fellow of the American College of Surgeons; a Diplomate of the American Board of Otolaryngology; a member of the American Academy of Ophthalmology and Otolaryngology and the American Medical Association.

His official address is Kittrell, N. C. He and his wife, the former Mrs. Rose of Kenly, N. C., and their sons, Leslie Osburn, II, are currently residing at Quarters "A," National Naval Medical Center.

"Attractiveness" Key Problem at Parley

QUANTICO, VA.

A delighted group comprising more than 120 of the nation's top civilian and military defense leaders left the Marine Corps Schools on 26 July after hearing President Eisenhower pledge his support for action to boost the attractiveness of a military career.

The Chief Executive, during informal remarks the day before to distinguished guests invited by Defense Secretary Charles E. Wilson, emphasized he was well aware of the critical need to attract and retain outstanding personnel for the Armed Forces.

The fact that the President joined top-ranking civilian and military chiefs of the Armed Forces in discussing the problem of Service Attractiveness at the Quantico meeting stirred speculation at the Pentagon this week that positive proposals to raise the prestige and benefits of military service will have energetic support henceforth.

From the initial briefing by Army Secretary Robert T. Stevens on Friday, 24 July, to the windup of the Secretaries' Conference on Sunday, there was heavy emphasis on the great expense and loss of combat efficiency which threatens the Defense Department as a result of the lowered prestige and benefits of military service.

Secretary Stevens, who in recent months has spoken frequently on the problem, was joined by Army Assistant Secretary James P. Mitchell in presenting the Service Attractiveness picture during the Army's briefing of officials from the Defense Department and the Navy, Air Force and Marine Corps.

Other speakers also referred to the need for obtaining and retaining high caliber personnel in uniform.

A strong plea for improvements in the family medical care situation was made by General Curtis E. LeMay, USAF, Strategic Air Command chief. He told the conference that large numbers of SAC personnel are constantly away from home bases on global training missions.

General LeMay said the morale and efficiency of the men flying the nation's bombers suffer when there is concern that loved ones at home are not receiving adequate medical care.

General LeMay emphasized also that in fulfilling its mission SAC must retain as many skilled officers and airmen as (Please turn to Next Page)

Korean War Ends

Under terms of the armistice agreed to this week by Allied and Communist negotiators, the enemy will retain most of the ground they won in the Kumsong bulge recently in the largest Red offensive in two years.

Even after the temporary peace settlement had been formally put into effect, the Communists fought on during the 12 hours that followed before the cease fire began.

During the days before the signatures of the chief negotiators were penned to the agreement, the enemy punched out bitter attacks on the central and western front. During the last 12 hours of the fighting, Allied troops had been ordered to hold their fire unless attacked. But Chinese and North Korean artillery continued to blast away to the final minute. Shortly before the guns ended their ceaseless chattering, the Allies let loose a tremendous barrage on the central front.

Both sides have fallen back a mile and a half to form a neutral zone. In the demilitarized zone will be the scenes of many battles which have been fought during the past two years. Among them are Heartbreak Ridge, Old Baldy, Pork Chop and T-Bone Hill on the west-central front, and The Hook and Bunker Hill in the east. Well-known hills in the zone also include Outpost Vegas, Outpost Berlin and Outpost Bak, Arrowhead Ridge, White Horse Hill, Outpost Harry, Sniper Ridge, Jane Russell Hill and Luke the Gook's Castle.

Along the east-central front, the Allies will hold a line that runs roughly east and west along the Pukhan River instead of retaining the bulge that curved northward as was the case before the recent 80,000-man enemy offensive.

Enemy casualties in the three-year-old conflict are estimated from approximately 1½ to 2½ million. As of 22 July, 24,965 Americans had died in the bloody war, another 13,285 were missing and 103,760, including 2,392 who later died, had been wounded. For the entire United Nations command, 72,000 were killed, 250,000 wounded and 84,000 are missing.

Shoots Down Transport

Sabre jet pilots looked in vain for enemy planes during the last day of the war, but no jets were sighted. Capt. Ralph S. Parr, Jr., became a double ace when he shot down a twin-engine, Russian-built IL-12 less than 10 hours before the shooting ceased. This did not qualify him to be a double jet ace, as he has shot down only nine jets and damaged two. The last jet flight was composed of six pilots who failed to encounter any enemy craft. The six jet pilots from the 18th Fighter-bomber wing who flew the last mission were: Col. Maurice L. Martin, Lt. Col. Harry K. Evans, Capt. Howard P. Mann, 1st Lt. Frank B. Harrison, 1st Lt. John H. Bartholoma; 1st Lt. Charles R. Beaver.

The Fifth Air Force, in a summary of its war-long operations, announced that its planes had destroyed 984 enemy planes, probably downed 159 others and damaged 965 Red craft. Of this total, 823 of the planes destroyed were MIG's. The announcement also listed 142 MIG's probably destroyed and 929 damaged. The summary did not include operations of planes, mainly B-29 bombers, of the Far East Air Forces.

The Fifth Air Force suffered 971 planes lost, 94 in air combat, 671 to ground fire and 206 to other causes. Of the total lost in air combat, 58 were Sabre jets. A total of 624,588 sorties during the war were made by the Fifth Air Force.

In other figures, the summary said the Fifth Air Force claimed the destruction of 1071 tanks, 82,753 boxcars, 890 gun positions, 1210 bridges, 119,329 buildings, 4664 supply shelters and 30,037 rail cuts. The air group also claimed to have inflicted 110,925 casualties on Communist troops, to have dropped 318,000 tons of bombs, 511,329 rockets, 792,200 rounds of ammunition and 178,500,900 rounds of 50-calibre ammunition.

Staff officers on both sides have agreed to start the exchange of prisoners 5 Aug. The Communists said they would exchange 12,763 captives, including 3,313 Americans. The number of Americans the Reds claim as captives is considerably below the figure estimated by this country. Over 13 thousand Americans are listed as missing in action, many of whom were believed to be prisoners.

The prisoners will be returned at a neutral point set aside near the mouth of the Imjin River. The United Nations will exchange 2,400 well prisoners and 360 sick captives daily, the Reds will turn over to the UN 300 prisoners daily.

Altogether, the Allies will turn over to the Communists about 5,000 Chinese and 69,000 North Koreans, and hand over for the future disposal to a neutral commission about 14,500 Chinese and 7,800 North Koreans who refuse repatriation.

A breakdown of the United Nations prisoners who will be returned, other than American and South Korean, follows: 922 British, 12 French, 228 Turks, 15 Australian, 40 Filipinos, 22 Colombians, 14 Canadians, 6 South Africans, 1 Greek, 1 Belgian and 3 Japanese.

Defense Secretary Wilson Stresses Resolve To Increase Services' "Effective Strength"

(Following is the text of the statement issued by Defense Secretary Charles E. Wilson on the night of 26 July, moments after President Eisenhower announced achievement of an armistice agreement).

"As an armistice agreement in Korea has been reached, we again pay a tribute from the heart to those hundreds of thousands of men whose bravery has proven that aggression can be stopped. The fighting abilities of our men in Korea have been the equal of those of any of our military forces in history.

"Words cannot express our everlasting debt of gratitude to those men who laid down their lives or suffered wounds that the assault on the free world unleashed in June 1950 would not pass unchallenged and unchecked.

"We all know that Korea has been only one small part of the threat that the free world faces from Communist imperialism. The end of the fighting in Korea does not mean the end of that threat.

"Before we can relax our efforts there must be real and continuing evidence of a complete change of heart and objectives on the part of those who are, by devious methods as well as by open warfare, attempting to force their reactionary system on the peoples of the free world.

"This truce, therefore, must not result in any let-down in our determination to complete the build-up of our defenses and to maintain them for as long as need be. We must not be misled into the same demobilization which followed World War I and II. Such a demobilization would inevitably again tempt an aggressor.

"The Defense Department is studying the results of this truce. We know that it will be a long time before we can with safety withdraw our troops from Korea. Under the terms of the exchange-of-prisoners agreement months will elapse before the exchange and release of prisoners is completed.

"We cannot expect any important reduction in defense spending in the near future as a consequence of the truce.

"Manufacturers, producers, suppliers and workers need have no concern regarding an abrupt cancellation of contracts for military equipment, supplies and services as a result of the truce in Korea. The continuing needs of the Department of Defense, including the military assistance program, are such that current production plans will be continued until such time as an orderly production plan can be worked out that will take into account the changed Korean requirements.

"The Department of Defense intends to move forward towards its objective of constantly increasing the effective strength of all our military services."

Career Attractiveness Conference Topic

possible for service as bomber crews.

Observers saw in the stress which he placed on Service Attractiveness a powerful source of influence on Capitol officials, since from his headquarters at Offutt AFB, Nebr., the SAC commander has rare opportunity to brief Pentagon officials in person on such matters.

On Sunday, as Secretary Wilson brought the sessions to a close, he spoke of the need for developing military leaders to take the place of the present Service chiefs. He stressed the requirement of making military service attractive to compare with the highest types of civilian careers and professions.

Military officials attending the conference contrasted the tenor of the Quantico sessions with the inexperienced early-year blasts by Pentagon civilian authorities against those in uniform.

As a result of the opportunity at Quantico for civilian and military leaders of all the Services to exchange viewpoints and to become acquainted on an informal basis, observers felt the conference would prove extremely significant in the months ahead.

Noteworthy is the fact that during the Summer and Fall months, Defense officials will be called upon to make final decisions on proposals relating to pay (the Strauss Commission), Dependent Care (the Moulton Commission) and the general problem of Service Attractiveness (the Womble Committee).

Military officials who have expressed concern during recent months not with the reaction of senior officers to loss of prestige in a military career but rather with the attitude of young officers and skilled non-commissioned officers, were heartened by the Quantico sessions.

DSM Cluster For B.G.

Brig. Gen. Edward H. Lastayo has been awarded the Oak Leaf Cluster to the Distinguished Service Medal for "exceptionally meritorious" service as commanding general of the Korean Base Section.

The award, presented at ceremonies at the KBC headquarters, cited General Lastayo for "displaying astute judgement and extraordinary capacity for prompt, forceful decisions."

Over 20,000 Officers Face Economy Axe

More than 20,000 Armed Forces officers, Regulars and non-Regulars, will leave active service in the next 11 months voluntarily or involuntarily.

The figure could go as high as 25,000 as the Services put into effect new policies to get within reduced manpower ceilings.

Since, except for critical specialists such as doctors, the Armed Forces have been striving for months to get on as voluntary a basis as possible, it is safely predictable that thousands of Reserve officers will be forced out.

Military officials this week did not attempt to hide their concern over the loss of morale which threatens as a result of the forthcoming cutbacks.

The Air Force, which will be hit hardest, already has begun to send out notifications to personnel who are to be forced out. It was reported this week that the initial group included 81 warrant officers and 281 second lieutenants.

Some estimates place Air Force officer releases among those now in service as high as 12,500 for fiscal '54, although there are other estimates that the loss will be closer to 10,000.

The Army indicated previously to the press in Korea that it must drop about 6000 or 7000 officers currently in service, mostly by not renewing expiring categories, but now several thousand more officers face release from duty.

This is because there are included in the 50,000 man Korean Package about 2000 or 3000 officers. If the truce conditions permit, the Army will lose the 50,000 package and thus will be required to release additional officers.

Figures on the number of Navy and Marine Corps officers who must be released from active duty by next 1 July are not as specific, but are expected to total in the thousands.

The Air Force had hoped and fought hard to keep its officer release requirements at about 4500, but a higher echelon decision this week sent Air Force reduction-in-force estimates soaring.

Assistant Secretary of Defense John A. Hannah, manpower and personnel chief, after long examination of an extremely complicated problem, ruled that the Air Force must bring on to active duty in fiscal '54 all of its 9600 recent ROTC graduates.

The Air Force wanted to call only the 3200 who have applied for flying training, the rest to be given indefinite suspensions of active duty calls.

But the Defense Department decided otherwise.

Now, the Air Force must release from active duty thousands of additional officers.

The Air Force screening board, which has already picked the first warrant officers and officers for separation, is expected to release names to major commanders in relatively small increments.

Defense Official Confirms Pentagon Pay Support

For the first time since 20 Jan., a top Defense Department official has put the Pentagon on record as having supported a cost-of-living pay adjustment for the Armed Forces.

Assistant Defense Secretary John A. Hannah told a press conference this week that the Department had endorsed the bill introduced by Representative James E. Van Zandt (R-Pa.), which would link military pay to the cost-of-living index.

Although THE JOURNAL during recent months reported repeatedly that the Defense Department had switched its position and was supporting a pay raise, no official had said this in so many words until Dr. Hannah spoke out this week.

He confirmed the persistent report that the Bureau of the Budget has held the pay raise proposal for some time.

Dr. Hannah did not state whether or not the Defense Department would include a pay raise in its 1954 program.

But the obvious fact now is this. Unless the Pentagon again shifts its thinking on military pay, the Defense Department will support a pay increase request in the second session of the 83d Congress.

Defense Funds Measure Hailed As 'Bill Of Distinction'; Has Less Than Voted

The fiscal '54 Defense Appropriations Bill, which began as a request from former President Truman for $40.7 billion, was placed on President Eisenhower's desk this week with a total Congressional approval of $34.3 billion—a figure below the original votes of both the House and Senate.

In presenting the report of the House-Senate Conference Committee this week, Representative Richard B. Wigglesworth (R-Mass.), Military Appropriations Subcommittee chairman, said:

"This conference report has the distinction of carrying with it a total which is not only less than the total carried by the Senate bill, but also less than the total carried by the House bill."

The measure, as it finally cleared Congress after a history which began in January, provides $12.9 billion for the Army, $9.4 for the Navy and $11.1 for the Air Force.

The total Defense appropriation will be $6.3 billion less than was asked by the Truman Administration and $1.4 billion less than was requested by the Eisenhower administration.

The 1954 defense appropriation is a whopping $12.8 billion less than the '53 bill.

Throughout the long months of the budget consideration, it was known that a group of civilian consultants engaged by Representative John Taber (R-NY), Appropriations Committee Chairman, was playing an important role behind the scenes.

Congressman Taber refused to disclose their identity notwithstanding the fact that some were on the Federal payroll.

However, during Mr. Wigglesworth's presentation on 29 July, he revealed the names of the men who voluntarily aided his subcommittee and whose work, he said, "will prove of great assistance to the Armed Services in the long run."

Peg Proficiency Flying At Maximum of 100 Hours

The more liberal Senate amendment permitting a maximum of 100 hours a year proficiency flying, instead of the previous minimum of 100 hours, was agreed to by conferees on the Military Appropriation bill. The House amendment would have limited proficiency flying to a maximum of 50 hours a year.

In accepting the Senate rider the conferees changed the wording to permit flight pay without actual flying to qualified officers "whose particular assignment outside the United States makes it impractical to participate in regular aerial flights."

The final form of the rider is as follows:

Sec. 628. Notwithstanding any other provision of law, executive order, or regulation, no part of the appropriations in this or any other Act shall be available for any expenses of operating aircraft under the jurisdiction of the Armed Forces for the purpose of proficiency flying except in accordance with regulations issued by the Secretaries of the Departments concerned and approved by the Secretary of Defense which shall establish proficiency standards and maximum and minimum flying hours for this purpose, but not to exceed one hundred hours during the fiscal year 1954: Provided, That, during the fiscal year 1954, without regard to any provision of law or executive order prescribing minimum flight requirements, such regulations may provide for the payment of flight pay at the rates prescribed in section 204 (b) of the Career Compensation Act of 1949 (63 Stat. 802) to certain officers of the Armed Forces otherwise entitled to receive flight pay (1) who have held aeronautical ratings or designations for not less than twenty years, or (2) whose particular assignment outside the United States makes it impractical to participate in regular aerial flights.

Increase For Children's Schooling Turned Down

Efforts of the Senate to provide more nearly adequate funds for the primary and secondary schooling of the children of Service personnel failed in conference on the Military Appropriations bill.

The conferees accepted the House's limitation of $225 per student, instead of the Senate's $240, in spite of testimony that such a limitation does not cover the cost and requires parents to make up the difference.

The Services have said the average cost per pupil per year in the dependent schools is about $250.

The difference between the appropriation and the cost is made up from welfare funds or from tuition charges.

House Accepts Senate's Increases in Mess Costs

Voted into the final defense appropriation bill this week was a rider designed to increase the mess costs of officers and civilians.

The conferees accepted the Senate version, with some rewording, which provides that the Secretary of Defense shall establish rates for meals sold, providing that officers and civilians in a travel status receiving a per diem allowance in lieu of subsistence shall be charged not less than $2.25 a day.

The wording of the rider as finally adopted follows:

Sec. 618. No appropriation contained in this Act shall be available for expenses of operation of messes (other than organized messes the operating expenses of which are financed principally from nonappropriated funds) at which meals are sold to officers or civilians except under regulations approved by the Secretary of Defense, which shall (except under unusual or extraordinary circumstances) establish rates for such meals sufficient to provide reimbursement of operating expenses and food costs to the appropriations concerned: Provided, That officers and civilians in a travel status receiving a per diem allowance in lieu of subsistence shall be charged at the rate of not less than $2.25 per day: Provided further, That for the purposes of this section payments for meals at the rates established hereunder may be made in cash or by deductions from the pay of civilian employees.

No Off-Duty School Aid For Officers Above Lt.

Congress has voted to ban payments during the current fiscal year to aid in tuition expenses or other costs for off-duty training of officers above the rank of first lieutenant in the Army and comparable grades in the other Services.

Thus, the legislators adopted the Senate version of the off-duty education rider. The House voted originally to prohibit off-duty education aid for any officers.

Pentagon officials had feared that the wording of the rider was so restrictive that it would make it illegal for the Services to process correspondence or extension courses.

However, in the windup budget discussions in Congress this week, it was indicated that the House-Senate conferees "do not intend . . . to eliminate correspondence or extension courses conducted by or through agencies of the Defense Department."

Rider Cracks Down On US Commissaries

A compromise amendment which can be interpreted so as to close all Service commissaries near cities and towns and turn others in the United States over to private operators was adopted by the Senate and House in final action on the Military Appropriations Act.

The original House amendment which would have restricted commissary customers exclusively to Service personnel and their families was dropped, but the essential provisions of the Senate amendment aimed at forcing Service personnel to buy at civilian stores were retained.

There was no discussion of the problem on the floor of either house. In each instance, the manager of the bill merely read the compromise amendment and the legislators approved.

It will be recalled that three years ago the attack on commissaries and post exchanges began in earnest. An amendment was put on the appropriation bill then requiring that prices be raised sufficiently to cover the cost of transportation, handling, spoilage, utilities, etc. That resulted in about a 15 per cent increase in commissary prices. Now the new amendment goes further and forces up prices again.

The full text of the amendment as finally written into law is as follows:

Sec. 624. No appropriation contained in this act shall be available in connection with the operation of commissary stores of the agencies of the Department of Defense for the cost of purchase (including commercial transportation in the United States to the place of sale but excluding all transportation outside the United States) and maintenance of operating equipment and supplies, and for the actual or estimated cost of utilities as may be furnished by the Government and of shrinkage, spoilage, and pilferage of merchandise under the control of such commissary stores, except as authorized under regulations promulgated by the Secretaries of the military departments concerned, with the approval of the Secretary of Defense, which regulations shall provide for reimbursement therefor to the appropriations concerned and, notwithstanding any other provision of law, shall provide for the adjustment of the sales prices in such commissary stores to the extent necessary to furnish sufficient gross revenue from sales of commissary stores to make such reimbursement: Provided, That under such regulations as may be issued pursuant to this section all utilities may be furnished without cost to the commissary stores outside the continental United States and in Alaska: Provided further, That no appropriation contained in this act shall, after December 31, 1953, be available in connection with the operation of commissary stores within the continental United States unless the Secretary of Defense has certified that items normally procured from commissary stores are not otherwise available at a reasonable distance and a reasonable price in satisfactory quality and quantity to the military and civilian employees of the Department of Defense: Provided further, That commissary stores are hereby authorized to be operated by private persons and privately owned organizations under such regulations as may be approved by the Secretary of Defense.

After the wedding, General Clark will come to Washington for official conferences. He and Mrs. Clark are expected to return to Tokyo about 10 Aug.

Depot Commander Retires

Brig. Gen. L. O. Grice, commander of the Jeffersonville Quartermaster Depot, Ind., since February 1950, ended 40 years of service 31 July when he retired from active duty.

He entered the National Guard in 1912 and served four years in the Atlanta, Ga., Cavalry. He served overseas during WWI and was in charge of the Clothing and Equipage Branch, Office of The Quartermaster General, during the early part of WWII. He later organized the Research and Development Branch of that Office. Subsequently, he served as Commanding officer in several supply depots in this country and abroad.

Prior to his last assignment, General Grice was in command of the New York Quartermaster Purchasing Office, New York City, for over three years. Under his command, the New York Quartermaster Procurement Agency developed into one of the largest procurement establishments in the country.

Named Depot C.G.

Brig. Gen. William L. Kay, Quartermaster School Commandant at Ft. Lee, Va., will take command of the Columbus, Ohio, General Depot in August.

In another one-star officer transfer announced this week by Army Secretary Robert T. Stevens, Brig. Gen. Louis T. Heath, 25th Infantry Division artillery commander in the Far East, will assume duties in September as CG of the 53d Anti-Aircraft Artillery Brigade at Swarthmore, Pa.

Okinawa Dependent Travel Faces Heavy Cutback

The lack of available housing has forced the Army to raise to 12 or 13 months the waiting period of families for travel to Okinawa.

Col. Herbert C. Reuter, Ryukyus Service Command chief, said the delay will be felt first by families previously notified they were on August shipping lists.

He said that dependent travel to Okinawa will cease entirely in August and will not be resumed until October.

Travel of Air Force families is not affected by the new order, according to official word from the Ryukyus.

KOREA PROMOTION BREAK

The Army has continued until 1 Sept. the liberalized criteria for promotion of soldiers assigned to forward area combat units in Korea.

This action, the Army said, will permit these men to obtain promotions under the more liberal criteria, provided they would have been eligible to receive such promotions by September had hostilities continued.

Shift QM Colonels

Col. Richard F. Dugan succeeds Col. Brisbane H. Brown as Commanding Officer, Belle Mead General Depot, Somerville, N. J. today, 1 Aug., upon the latter's retirement due to physical disability.

Col. William E. Pheris, former Chief, Executive Group, ASTAPA, has been assigned as Inspector General, Quartermaster Training Command, Ft. Lee, Va.

Col. Frank G. Marchman, formerly Deputy Commanding Officer, Atlanta, Ga., General Depot, retired 31 July upon completion of 30 years' service.

Col. Norman P. Williams, recently relieved from assignment in Indo-China, also retired on 31 July 1953 after more than 30 years' service.

Honor Gen. March

The Senate has approved the resolution tendering the thanks of Congress to General Peyton C. March, USA-Ret., War War I Chief of Staff. It now goes to the House for its concurrence.

Meanwhile the House Armed Services Committee has reported favorably on a similar resolution.

In putting the measure before the Senate, Chairman Leverett Saltonstall (R-Mass.), of the Armed Services Committee, said, "I believe the thanks of Congress are long overdue to an eminent officer of the First World War who has now reached the ripe, fine, old age of 88 years."

The full text of the resolution appeared in last week's issue of THE JOURNAL.

Army A-Expert Assigned

Col. Angelo Ralph Del Campo, project officer and coordinator of the Ordnance aspects of the nation's atomic artillery program, has been appointed director of the Ballistic Research Laboratories at Aberdeen Proving Ground, Md.

He replaced Col. Alden P. Taber, who has been assigned to a ten-month course at the Industrial College of the Armed Forces in Washington, D. C.

Colonel Del Campo was Chief of Atomic Applications, Office, Chief of Ordnance, from 1948 until mid-1950 when he was put in charge of the Research and Materials Branch of the OCO. A year later he attended the Industrial College of the Armed Forces until his present assignment.

Boost Rank For Top Military Districts

Army Secretary Robert T. Stevens announced this week assignment of three brigadier generals to be Military District commanders, responsible for Reserve training in Pennsylvania, New Jersey, and Illinois.

These are the first general officers assigned such posts since Korea.

The chances are that additional general officers will be named Military District chiefs in the near future, as the availability of brigadier generals permits.

The Reserve Officers Association recently called for assignment of a general officer to head each of the Military Districts.

The Army undoubtedly would be hard pressed to meet such a demand, but with eased demands resulting from the closing of training divisions and installations finds itself able to name some general officers to Military Districts.

Brig. Gen. Theodore L. Futch, Artillery Commander of the V Corps in Europe, will return to the U. S. in August to command the Pennsylvania Military District with headquarters at Indiantown Gap Military Reservation.

Brig. Gen. Oliver W. Hughes, CG of the Western Area Command, U. S. Army, Europe, has been named CG of the Illinois Military District at Chicago. He will take over his new duties probably late in September.

Brig. Gen. John H. Stokes, jr., Assistant Chief of Staff for Plans and Operations, Allied Forces Southern Europe, has been appointed CG of the New Jersey Military District, with headquarters at Kearny Shipyard, Kearny. The change is effective either in August or September.

OFFICER VACANCIES

The Army announces in Circular No. 58 that there are officer shortages in the Artillery, Corps of Engineers, Ordnance Corps, Judge Advocate General's Corps and Medical Service Corps. Applications are being accepted for transfer or detail to these branches, submitted in accordance with AR 605-145 and Circular 58.

2d Army Golfers Win

A former White House Aide to two Presidents, Col. Edward H. Young, was one of a team of four colonels who helped Second Army win back the Armed Forces Golfer's Trophy from First Army, in one of the main events of the Sixth Annual Armed Forces Golf, Swimming and Tennis Tournament 23 July at the Philmont Country Club, Philmont, Pa. This special event, which was limited to colonels gave Second Army a winning team average score of 91. First Army finished with 99.

Other members of the winning team were Col. Edward M. Starr, Assistant Chief of Staff, G-3 Section, Second Army; Col. Henry L. Luongo, Chief, Plans and Operations Division, G-3 Section, Second Army; and Col. R. H. Chard, Commanding Officer of the 2053d ASU Reception Center, at Fort Meade, Md.

McConnell has been named assistant chief of staff, G-1, succeeding Colonel Sellers. Colonel McConnell presently is deputy for training of the 1953 Infantry ROTC camp at Ft. Benning.

Committee Would Keep Officers on Jobs Longer

Charging that the practice of rotating military assignments results in "inexperience and lack of continuity" in the business activities of the Services, a subcommittee of the House Committee on Government Operations this week demanded that the Secretary of Defense report to it "at the earliest possible moment" what action is being taken to correct "this serious and costly defect."

The report on rotation was only one of eight which the Subcommittee, under Chairman R. Walter Riehlman (R-NY), instructed the Department to compile and submit back to the Congressmen.

Others the Subcommittee "requested" from the Department included:

1. A report on whether disciplinary action is indicated in the cases of the Army overcoat purchases, the Navy forklift trucks and the Air Force chain-link fencing.
2. A report on what action is taken on recommendations that more frequent use be made of advice of business and industry groups.
3. A report on what is being done to review directives, practices, etc. "tending to inhibit or obstruct free and full access to information by Congressional committees."
4. A report from the Navy on fixing responsibility for the purchase of "useless equipment" from the Gibson Manufacturing Co.
5. A report from the Army and Navy on disposition of equipment withdrawn from service and "taking up space in warehouses."
6. A report from the Army on what use was made of money appropriated in 1947 for uniforms and not used for that purpose.
7. A report from the Air Force on the use made of security chain-link fencing procured in 1950.

The entire report, which has been accepted by the full committee, is severely critical of the Armed Services. "The subcommittee believes," the report stated, "that the military services have an unrealistic approach to procurement. It feels that the whole business operation of the military is needlessly inefficient and that there exists a persistent attitude against changing to a better coordinated and more effective business system."

Rifle Championships

The National Rifle Association Regional High Power Rifle Championships will open next week at the Marine Barracks, Camp Lejeune, N. C.

Composed of nine matches, the four-day event (3-6 Aug.) will feature one Free Rifle Match, five individual fired matches, one team match and two aggregate matches.

The championships are being sponsored by the Marine Barracks and will be held under the direction of the base commander, Maj. Gen. Henry D. Linscott.

Lt. Col. John W. Russell is executive officer of the meet; Maj. Maxie A. Moore is the statistical officer, and Col. Perry Swindler is official referee.

247 YEARS OF SERVICE. These seven Army colonels who trooped the line for the last time during a retirement ceremony at Ft. Meade, Md., represent a total of 247 years of combined military service. Brig. Gen. Ginsburgh To Leave Active Service

Brig. Gen. A. Robert Ginsburgh, USAF, who has served in the Office of the Secretary of Defense under Secretaries Louis Johnson, George C. Marshall, Robert A. Lovett and Charles E. Wilson, retired on 31 July after a distinguished career which began with his appointment in 1917 as a Regular Army second lieutenant.

General Ginsburgh won wide recognition in the Armed Forces and in the highest civilian echelons for service on the staffs of Secretaries of War Hurley, Patterson and Royall.

During WWII, General Ginsburgh went to the Southwest Pacific, where he served as G-1, G-3 and G-5 of the U. S. Services of Supply.

Before leaving for overseas duty, he organized the Industrial Services Division of the Services of Supply which was responsible for stimulating production in industrial plants. He initiated and administered the Army and Navy "E" Award program.

A recipient of the Distinguished Service Medal, General Ginsburgh is a graduate of the Field Artillery School, Industrial College and the Army-Navy Staff College.

He holds an A.B. and LL.B. from Harvard, an M.A. in history from the University of Louisville and an M.A. in journalism from the University of Missouri.

Prior to his assignment to the OSD, he was Deputy Director of Air Force Public Relations.

Navy Forced To Raise Rents Of Enlisted Men

Rents for Navy housing occupied by Navy and Marine Corps enlisted personnel will be raised on 1 Oct. as the result of a recent Bureau of the Budget ruling which establishes rentals on a comparability basis.

New rents will be comparable to those now charged for private housing of similar character in the same area. The Navy said, "What the actual rent increases will be cannot be properly computed since comparability varies in all localities." However, "it is possible," the Navy said, "that the order will affect all of the Navy operated housing projects."

Appeal Denied

The announcement first went out to Navy commands on 30 June in AlNavSta 12, after the Bureau of the Budget had denied a Navy Department appeal to exempt housing occupied by enlisted personnel from compliance with the new directive.

This week the Navy said when the new system goes into effect on 1 Oct., enlisted men will pay the same comparable rent as officers and civilians for occupancy in similar rental housing. In some cases, it was noted, the total charge "may exceed the basic allowance for quarters" which enlisted personnel now receive.

Three Increments

As previously announced in AlNavSta 12, the increase will be cushioned somewhat by raising the rent in three increments. From 1 Oct. to 1 Jan. 1954, enlisted personnel will pay only one-third of the increase resulting from the comparability method of fixing rents. From 1 Jan. to 1 April, they will pay another one-third of the increase, and after 1 April, they will pay the full amount of the increase.

Studies are now underway at Navy and Marine Corps bases to determine the increases which will be put into effect at each base.

Furniture charges and cost of utilities also will be raised under the plan.

The new rents will not affect public quarters that are provided by the Government and occupied by Service personnel with loss of their quarters allowances. Similarly, they will not apply to Title VIII (Wherry) housing that has been constructed at certain stations and is operated by private owners.

USMC Meritorious Promotions

The Marine Corps has announced new quotas for meritorious promotion to the grades of corporal and sergeant. They are: 11 per cent to sergeant and 17 per cent to corporal.

At the same time it was noted that no quotas are contemplated for promotion to any grade above sergeant.

Five-Star Exec. To Europe

Inspect Marine Troops; Third Div. To Far East

Top-ranking members of the Navy and Marine Corps flew this week to Camp Lejeune, N. C., to inspect troops there following departure of personnel of the Second Marine Division to the West Coast where they are joining units of the Third Marine Division for shipment to the Far East.

Maj. Gen. Pepper

Disclosure that the Third Division will be moved to the Pacific was made by the White House late last week. The Division, based at Camp Pendleton, Calif., is commanded by Maj. Gen. Robert H. Pepper.

Replaces Korean Vets

Headquarters has not announced the movement date for the Division but it was learned that personnel from the Second Division at Lejeune are being transferred to Pendleton to replace Korean veterans now serving with the Third. Presumably, they also will be used to staff under-strength elements of General Pepper's organization.

Heading the inspection party which visited Lejeune this week were General Lemuel C. Shepherd, Jr., Commandant of the Marine Corps, and Under Secretary of the Navy Charles S. Thomas. General Shepherd was accompanied by Brig. Gen. Nels H. Nelson, Assistant Chief of Staff, G-1; Brig. Gen. R. H. Ridgely, Director of Personnel, and Lt. Col. James C. Short, the Commandant's Aide.

Review Troops

The group witnessed a large-scale review of troops and equipment on 30 July as the guests of Maj. Gen. Henry D. Linscott, Commanding General of the base. Units in the review were commanded by Maj. Gen. George F. Good, Jr., CG of the Second Division, and Brig. Gen. Francis B. Loomis, CG, Force Troops, Atlantic. Marine Corps Headquarters said most, if not all, of the Second Division troops slated for transfer to the Third Division were on their way to the West Coast before the arrival of the inspecting party. Other Marines were transferred to Camp Pendleton from the Marine Corps Air Stations at Cherry Point, N. C., and Santa Ana, Calif.

These included three F9F squadrons from Marine Air Group 11 at Cherry Point, and Marine Air Group 16, one transport squadron, one observation squadron and one Ground Control Intercept Unit from Santa Ana.

Only recently the Corps dispatched more than 4,000 members of the Third Division to Hawaii to train with the 1st Provisional Marine Air-Ground Task Force at Kaneohe Bay. These troops, comprising the Third Regimental Combat Team, under the command of Col. Robert H. Williams, will rejoin their parent organization on its way to the Far East Command.

Marines Cut OCS

The Marine Corps disclosed this week that it will have to curtail its officer candidate program during Fiscal '54 as a result of budgetary restrictions.

Only two classes will be conducted. The first will be convened in November '53 and the second in May '54.

Inactive Marine Reservists will not be assigned to the officer candidate screening courses, Headquarters said.

Applications now on file will be processed as follows:

Applicants who attained two-year college level EET score will be withdrawn without further action. Applicants now pending final action of HQMC who possess 120 GCT and who have not been administered EET will be authorized to take EET. Applicants with college degree or four-year EET score and GCT of 120 will undergo selection for assignment to the November class.

Marine commanders are being urged to encourage applicants in all categories to apply for the Naval Aviation Cadet Program.

Deputy Chief of BuPers

Rear Adm. Murr E. Arnold has reported to Washington as relief for Rear Adm. Joseph F. Bolger, Deputy Chief of Naval Personnel. No new assignment has been announced for Admiral Bolger.

Admiral Arnold, a 1923 graduate of the U. S. Naval Academy, formerly commanded Carrier Division 15. His new assignment marks his third tour of duty in the Bureau of Naval Personnel.

A Naval Aviator, he served during WWII as Air Officer of the USS Yorktown until the carrier was sunk in the Battle of Midway. Later he commanded the USS Fanshaw Bay.

Admiral Bolger, also a Naval Aviator, has been Deputy Chief of Naval Personnel since October 1951. He was decorated twice with the Navy Cross during WWII for his services while in command of the USS Intrepid.

Adm. Leggett Is Named New Chief of BuShips

President Eisenhower has nominated Rear Adm. Wilson D. Leggett, Jr., to succeed Rear Adm. Homer N. Wallin as Chief of the Bureau of Ships. The shift previously had been predicted in THE JOURNAL.

Rear Adm. Leggett

Admiral Leggett was appointed to the U. S. Naval Academy in 1917. During WWI he served as a Midshipman in the battleships Ohio, Wyoming and Utah. He was graduated and commissioned in 1920.

Three years later he reported for submarine training at New London, Conn., and subsequently served aboard submarines and destroyers until he reported for instruction in diesel engineering at the Postgraduate School, Annapolis. Continuing this course at Columbia University, he received the degree of Master of Science in May 1927.

Prior to WWII he served as engineer and commanding officer aboard submarines, as Division Engineer Officer on the staff of Commander Submarine Division Ten, and in two assignments with the Bureau of Engineering. During this period he was instrumental in initiating and bringing to fulfillment a program of diesel engine development which freed the U. S. Navy of dependence on German designs and made possible the diesel electric propulsion which proved so successful in WWII.

During the war he served as Maintenance Officer of the Seventh Fleet, an assignment in which he earned the Legion of Merit. He returned to the United States in November 1945 as Planning Officer of the Charleston Naval Shipyard, S. C., where he remained until April 1947 when he became Commanding Officer and Director of the U. S. Naval Engineering Experiment Station at Annapolis. He has been Deputy and Assistant Chief of the Bureau of Ships since February 1951.

President Names Two Admirals For 3-Stars

President Eisenhower this week nominated Rear Adm. John E. Gingrich for the rank of Vice Admiral while serving as Chief of Naval Material.

At the same time, he nominated Vice Adm. Charles W. Fox (SC), USN, to have that rank on the retired list. Admiral Fox retired on 1 Aug.

Admiral Gingrich

Admiral Gingrich, presently serving as Deputy Chief of Naval Operations, is a 1919 graduate of the United States Naval Academy. An unrestricted Line officer, he is 56.

Born in Dodge City, Kans., in 1897, he served aboard the battleships Pennsylvania, Maryland, Idaho and New Mexico, following his graduation from the Naval Academy. Just prior to World War II, he served as Aide to the Under Secretary of the Navy and later the Secretary of the Navy. During the War, he commanded the cruiser USS Pittsburgh in action against the Japanese. Before his present assignment he was Commander of the Blockading and Escort Force in the Far East Command.

Admiral Fox

Admiral Fox, who has completed more than 40 years' of Naval service, was decorated this week with his second

Rear Adm. Gingrich

Legion of Merit for his work as Chief of Naval Material during the past two years of the Korean conflict.

Entering the Navy as an enlisted man, he served in destroyers through the Mexican campaign of 1914, and during WWI had North Atlantic convoy duty in destroyers operating out of Irish ports. Later, following promotion to warrant pay clerk, he was ordered to duty with Naval air units in France.

Commissioned an Ensign in the Supply Corps in 1919, Admiral Fox was serving aboard the USS Enterprise when the Japanese struck at Pearl Harbor in 1941. He remained aboard the carrier throughout the first year of the war and participated in nearly every major carrier battle of the period. Fly Or Be Dropped AF To Tell ROTC Srs.

At the direction of the Defense Department, the Air Force will issue shortly a formal policy announcement which will state that with the exception of 1000 administrative officers in critical specialties, the 13,000-14,000 fourth year AF ROTC students must sign up for flight training or be dropped from the program.

This was disclosed at the Pentagon by Assistant Defense Secretary John A. Hannah. His statement means that the percentage of senior AF ROTC students who will go on to flying training after graduation will soar.

This year, roughly one out of every three graduates signed up for flying training, more than twice the ratio of flying applicants obtained last year.

The Air Force has planned for months an energetic program to raise the number of ROTC students who want to fly. Now, as a result of the new edict, the program may be less essential.

Dr. Hannah conceded at a Pentagon press conference that the Air Force was being forced to break a "moral contract" with its ROTC students who agreed to enter the program and to serve after graduation, but who now must apply for flying training or be washed out of the program.

Some, obviously, would be unable to meet physical requirements.

Dentist Repairs Radar

A dentist's ingenuity was responsible recently for the continued operation of the radar screen at Keflavik Airport, Iceland.

The radar maintenance crew at the MATS base examined the burned-out radar set and determined it would be impossible to fix with the materials on hand. They predicted a delay of 60 days before the necessary parts arrived from this country.

However, Lt. Jerome H. Perry, assigned as a dentist with the 1400th Medical Squadron, Iceland Defense Force, learned of the situation and offered his aid. By relining the burned portion with silver amalgam, the set was soon put in working condition.

AF Secretary Hails Fine Combat Record of FEF

Air Force Secretary Harold E. Talbott on 28 July dispatched to General O. P. Weyland, Far East Air Forces Commander, a congratulatory message which told of the heavy punishment inflicted upon the enemy in Korea by FEF.

Secretary Talbott related that the Air Force "for the present" will continue to bring airmen home individually under FEF's policies. The secretary added, however, that "by the time a peace treaty may be formulated, your headquarters and ours will complete details of the reallocation of units and personnel that may then be possible."

Here is the complete text of the Secretary's message:

"I would like to express my deep appreciation to you and each member of your command for the tremendous part you have played in driving the Communist aggressors from South Korea and in making them want a ceasefire.

"Every one of us here at home should remember forever what you of the Far East Air Forces have done to check the tide of aggression thousands of miles from our shores. For more than three years you have carried on offensive operations to the maximum extent permitting by rules unprecedented in aerial warfare. Within the area in which you were free to operate, you made supply movements a nightmare for the enemy and killed or wounded an estimated 180,000 of his troops. You imposed upon the masters in the Kremlin who care little how many North Koreans and Chinese are killed, a much more persuasive penalty: more than 1,000 aircraft destroyed, including 838 of the excellent Russian-made MIG-15s; some 81,000 supply vehicles, 10,000 railway cars and 1,300 tanks put out of action.

"While you carried the fight to the aggressors with more than three-quarters of a million separate flights, our own surface forces enjoyed almost complete freedom from enemy air attack. Communist bombing behind our lines was so limited that their occasional sneak raids by a handful of planes made big news.

"U. S. Loses 1,000 Planes"

"I am keenly aware that your accomplishments were not achieved without the loss of many of our finest and bravest young men. I realize also that approximately 1,000 of your aircraft were destroyed by enemy action, more than two-thirds of them by groundfire while attacking targets in support of ground forces. Naturally, since the enemy air force seldom dared to attack our troops and supply lines, it suffered few comparable losses to UN groundfire.

"In some respects the period you are now entering will be more difficult than that through which you have come. Undoubtedly you hope, as I do, that the truce will lead ultimately to a peace that is real and reasonably secure. But today the Chinese and Korean Communist armies still stand in North Korea, and behind them is the Chinese Communist Air Force with its more than 2,000 planes.

"Furthermore, Soviet Russia still has more than 5,000 additional tactical airplanes deployed in the Far East. In Siberia, the Soviets have bases from which their long-range bombers could operate against Japan and the United States.

"Indo-China Threat Remains"

"There remains, as well, the threat of Communist arms in Indo-China, gateway to the resources of Southeast Asia.

"Although you and I hope for peace, the Communists have taken no action as yet that reduces their ability to resume aggression. For the time being, I must ask you to continue to guard our Pacific frontier.

"It will be harder to maintain vigilance now than when you were keyed to daily combat, but it will be as necessary as ever that you do so.

"I know that you will try to avoid friction and incidents. If they come, nevertheless, as they have during most past truces,

I am confident that you will meet them with coolness and intelligence.

"For the present we will continue to bring our airmen home individually under FEF's policies, which currently provide that each become eligible for rotation upon completion of a fixed normal tour but actually returns as his replacement is available. By the time a peace treaty may be formulated, your headquarters and ours will complete details of the reallocation of units and personnel that may then be possible."

Benefits For Survivors Of Retired Up To Senate

The bill to permit Service personnel to elect various options providing benefits for surviving dependents after retirement was reported out favorably by the Senate Committee on Armed Services this week.

The bill is now on the Senate Calendar and action is expected momentarily. The measure already has been passed by the House but perfecting amendments added by the Senate Committee would require a conference.

The bill gives service personnel various options to forego portions of their retired pay to provide incomes to their widows and/or children if the latter should survive them.

50th Anniversary of Flight

Ten members of Congress will assist in this year's celebration of the 50th Anniversary of Powered Flight honoring the achievement of the Wright Brothers in 1903 and the tremendous contribution of aviation to world progress.

These members also serve on the National Committee to observe the 50th Anniversary of Powered Flight of which General James H. Doolittle is chairman.

A joint resolution, enacted by Congress as Public Law 32, authorized Vice President Richard Nixon and House Speaker Joseph W. Martin to appoint the committee.

Members are: Senators Leverett Saltonstall, jr. (R-Mass.); Clyde R. Hoey (D-N. C.); John W. Bricker (R-Ohio); and John F. Kennedy (D-Mass.); Representatives Carl Hinshaw (R-Calif.); J. Capitol Experts Slate Prelim. W.O. Review

Staff experts of the House and Senate Armed Services Committees have made preliminary plans to conduct informal background hearings on the Warrant Officer Promotion Bill this fall.

If this procedure is followed, the legislation would be assured speedy treatment during the second session of the 83d Congress.

It is recalled that staff experts of the House Armed Services Committee paved the way for rapid modification of the drastic Davis Amendment early in the first session of the 83d Congress by assembling detailed data while Congress was adjourned.

The tentative schedule calls for presentations on the Warrant Officer Promotion Bill in October.

The legislation, introduced early this month after more than three years of delays, is seen as certain to receive favorable reaction on Capitol Hill. Legislators in 1949 indicated their desire for adequate warrant officer promotion opportunities when they approved the four pay-grade warrant officer structure in the Career Compensation Act.

The Warrant Officer Bill is designed to provide career opportunities for warrant officers similar to those assured officers in the Officer Personnel Act of 1947.

Quantico "Get-together." The three-day conference of top military and civilian defense leaders concluded Sunday, 26 July, with a general feeling that it had been most successful and that it will contribute immeasurably to smooth working of the Pentagon machinery and the betterment of the Armed Services. Before the "get-together," there were some who looked with kindly and self-conscious misgivings on the application to the military of the business-organization technique of high-level conferences away from headquarters, interlarded with games, relaxation and a little fun, all on a first-name basis. Even those skeptics now concede that Secretary of Defense Charles E. Wilson's idea was fruitful and productive.

Particularly gratifying to all the Services was the opportunity afforded at Quantico for a full discussion of the vexing problem of the deteriorating attractiveness of the Services as a career. The issue was formulated in the initial presentation—that made by the Army—and was amplified with expert documentation in successive presentations by the Navy and Air Force.

Most significantly, President Eisenhower told the distinguished gathering that everything possible must be done to aid the Services in getting and keeping top-notch career personnel. The Commander-in-Chief pledged the full support of the White House. In doing so, he effectively followed up the statement this spring in his Reorganization Message to Congress, disclosing that he had asked his Secretary of Defense to investigate the problem of Service Attractiveness.

At Quantico, during the formal briefings, and also during the informal "get acquainted" sessions wisely planned by Mr. Wilson, civilian and military leaders were able to probe the causes of the loss in military prestige and career attractiveness. They discussed ways in which this problem can be alleviated and thereby insure economy of money and men and the retention of combat efficiency.

The conference not only gave many military leaders an opportunity to get their views before their new Secretary and new members of the high command, but also afforded Secretary Wilson a chance to meet and learn to know his military assistants more intimately than would be permitted by his busy schedule at his Pentagon office. To all of this, the Marine Corps hosts at their Quantico stronghold contributed heavily by their hospitality and their ever-present solicitude of the comfort and pleasure of the participants.

The unexpected and strong stress laid upon Career Attractiveness was particularly fortunate at this time when Congress has been bearing down with renewed vigor against commissaries, proficiency flying, off-duty education, and other factors that add both to professional fitness and family welfare in the Services. With the President and the top-side Defense Department officials working and planning together, some improvement definitely can be expected.

A Blow to Morale. The Congressional amendment to the Military Appropriation bill aimed at depriving Service families of their traditional commissary privileges will have a serious effect on Service morale and will complicate further the problem of attracting and retaining non-commissioned and junior commissioned officers.

As finally agreed to by both houses of Congress, the rider prohibits the use of appropriated funds for the operation of commissaries in the United States unless the Secretary of Defense certifies that there are no suitable civilian operated stories within "reasonable" distance and at "reasonable" prices. The Secretary is also authorized to enter into contracts with private individuals or corporations to operate commissaries. The interpretation committee members place on the new wording is that it will entirely knock out commissaries in posts and stations near metropolitan centers and transfer the operation of many others from the Services themselves to private concessionaires.

The House provision which would have withdrawn commissary privileges from all but Service personnel and their immediate families (thus depriving, for example, Service widows of such purchases) was dropped. This, however, is an empty gesture if the entire commissary system is to be so altered that its privileges are meaningless.

What the demise of the commissary system will mean to the Armed Services, not only in the welfare of Service families but also to the effi-

Career Attractiveness

Editor, THE JOURNAL:
The Army states it is concerned with the thoughts and esprit de corps of its personnel. Then let it conduct a survey regarding the Colonel's letter in your 16 May issue of THE JOURNAL. The results would be most revealing to the high level officers of the Army and to Congress as to the degree and scope of the unattractiveness of the Army as a career.

The Colonel listed important grievances but there are more.

No self respecting person will seek or remain in a profession in which he is continually harassed.

25 YEARS COMMISSIONED SERVICE

Family Housing

Editor, THE JOURNAL:
There is still not suitable housing available for officer or enlisted personnel.

Housing is something which costs the Government nothing. The cost of even the most elaborate quarters built in previous years has been paid back five to twenty fold. With this evidence before them, our lawmakers sold out to the insurance lobbies with the result that we have inferior and inadequate privately financed housing (Wherey) which when available entitles you in the main, to a small combination living-dining room, a small kitchen, two or three tiny bedrooms and sometimes a storage locker shared in an apartment structure with numerous dogs, cats, children, and other unfortunates. These structures will probably be sold to the Government as soon as the initial investment and adequate profit has been assured by these private concerns and will most surely end up as adequate quarters.

The very sad part, however, is that in some locations, even these unsatisfactory walls and roofs are unavailable.

Is any other section of society subjected to a change or location over which they have no control and required to move without promise, investigations, or evident concern as to where they might find suitable quarters for their families?

This one factor alone probably causes more concern than any other factor and as officers get older, this uncertainty becomes almost a mental block in even the most normal families.

Promotions

Editor, THE JOURNAL:
No officer today above the rank of Ensign or Lieutenant has the slightest idea of what his prospects are for promotion or approximately when he can expect it. The number of officers in the services and the percentages in each grade are written into law, and are subject to further change each year by the route of limitation on appropriation or any other restrictive legislation which may seem advisable.

For example, many of my brother-officers have been Commanders in the Navy for almost eight years now. Can anyone, in the Navy or out of it, tell them even approximately when they can expect promotion to Captain? I think not.

Now stagnation of promotions has been recognized for 100 years as a stifling effect on ambition and initiative in the Armed Forces and yet all we hear is tumult in the halls of Congress about officers retiring after over 30 years' service but still in their 50's. Many would be happy to retire then to make room for younger officers even though their chances of getting a job at that age are infinitesimal except for an outstanding few who have made a name for themselves.

As a matter of fact, the greatest single shot in the arm to provide a steady flow of promotions would be to permit the 20-year retirement provisions to again operate. Many officers would take advantage of this in their early forties, albeit with small retired pay but a reasonable chance of finding employment at that age. Since less than 1 per cent can become a general or an admiral, those who assess their careers as not including that probability may leave the service without the stigma of being forced out 10 years later as well as lessening the clogging of higher ranks.

COMMANDER, USN

ciency and strength of the military establishment, is ably set forth in testimony given to a House subcommittee by Maj. Gen. Boniface Campbell, USA, which THE JOURNAL prints on the next page of this issue. It should be read and pondered by every member of the Appropriations Committee.

This crackdown, in fact, was only one of many blows administered by the legislative branch in the new Appropriations Act. The total funds finally agreed upon were lower than the bill as passed by either body, and considerably lower than the cut-down budget submitted by the Administration. Proficiency flying, schooling of dependent children, shipment of household goods, off-duty education of officers and other aids to Service efficiency and every-day living suffered at the hands of Congress.

Surely, the time is critical for positive action on the problem of the progressive deterioration of Service Career Attractiveness.

10 Years Ago—

Complete independence of the Philippine Islands, now scheduled to become effective 4 July 1946, would be advanced to one month after date of passage of special resolutions introduced in Congress this week.

50 Years Ago—

Upon recommendation of the Commandant of the U. S. Naval Academy, the Secretary of the Navy has directed that the rule prohibiting smoking among the Midshipmen be revoked in the case of the members of the First Class. In the opinion of the Secretary and the Commandant it is a reflection on the good sense and character of members of the First Class to place them under a rule that is not exacted of men the same age in other professions. Abolishment of the rule prohibiting smoking has been tried with success at West Point.

85 Years Ago—

Notwithstanding attacks made on the Signal Corps, military men generally have come to the conclusion that such a corps is not only an important, but an absolutely essential part of the organization of a grand army. Although we have still much to learn in this branch of the military art, our progress has already attracted the attention of foreign powers, which have asked permission to have officers of their army instructed in our system of signalling by means of flags and lights, as well as in the use of the telegraph. It is undoubtedly destined to play an important part in future wars.

Commissary Morale Value Discussed

Army G-1 Expert, Speaking for All Services, Tells Capitol Hill of Commissary Importance, But Money Bill Makes Many Shut-Downs a Fait Accompli.

MORALE implications of Commissary Stores on military installations were described this week to the House Committee on Government Operations by Maj. Gen. Boniface Campbell, USA, Deputy Assistant Chief of Staff, G-1, speaking for Maj. Gen. Robert N. Young, USA, Assistant Chief of Staff, G-1.

Maj. Gen. Campbell

General Campbell's presentation was made even as the 1954 Appropriations Act which would close scores of Commissaries was on the President's desk for his signature. There is no opportunity for the President to item veto riders in Appropriations legislation. Hence, the drastic Commissary action was a fait accompli as a result of closed-door action when General Campbell testified in open session before the Government Operations Committee.

General Campbell's statement, made on behalf of all the Services, undoubtedly will form the basis for certain efforts by military officials to gain relief at a later time from the newly imposed restriction in the money bill.

Here is the text of General Campbell's statement on Service Commissaries:

Vicious "Sutler System"

"From a morale standpoint, I believe it would be difficult to overstate the value of the commissary store to members of the Armed Forces, particularly to the married enlisted men. Commissary stores have been traditional with the Services since 1866. They replaced a vicious 'sutler system' in vogue during the Civil War. They have always been considered an important motivating factor for those who select the military services as a career.

"As the committee is doubtlessly aware, we in the Armed Forces are greatly concerned at present about the severe drop in the re-enlistment rate among our Regular Service personnel, particularly among our senior noncommissioned officers.

"In the Army this re-enlistment rate among our top three grades of enlisted men, the senior non-commissioned officers, has dropped from 58 per cent immediately preceding the Korean conflict to a 24.3 rate at present.

"In the Navy there is a similar trend toward loss of senior enlisted personnel, and the Air Force, in the higher technical specialties, is experiencing re-enlistment rates as low as 15 per cent among their highly trained and qualified non-commissioned officers.

"At the present rate of re-enlistment the Regular Army strength will decline from the 550,000 at present to about 300,000 in the next three years. The most serious aspect of this problem is not apparent in raw statistics. It shows up in an analysis of the kind of men we are losing—the Regular NCO's in the services with from 12 to 15 years of service—the men who are the traditional backbone of the Regular Services.

Non-Com Bachelors Gone

"I should like to point out here that 62 per cent of these senior non-commissioned officers among Army personnel are married. We no longer have services made up of bachelors as we once had. The commissary is, of course, very important to these family enlisted men. In the case of officers, the situation is much the same. Thirty-six per cent of all ROTC students tendered appointments in the Regular Army, during the period 1949-1952, declined; the percentage of resignations from the USMA jumped from 5.4 per cent in 1950 to 11.9 per cent in 1952. In the Navy ROTC program the number applying for Regular Navy commissions dropped from 60 per cent in 1950 to 10 per cent in 1952. Many senior officers fear that the quality of junior officers may be affected.

"While there are many factors which contribute to the attractiveness of the service as a career and the man's attitude toward remaining in the service, we feel that the privilege of using the commissary is an important consideration when the time comes for him to make this decision.

"The privilege of purchasing subsistence for his family from the commissary has traditionally been an important emolument of military service and was so considered by the Hook Commission in establishing the pay structure for the military services which was enacted into the Career Compensation Act of 1949. It seems inconsistent that we be so concerned with maintaining strong military forces for the sake of national safety, as to be willing to spend billions of dollars in their development and, at the same time, permit any controllable action to be introduced which impinges directly on the morale of such forces.

Matter of Serious Concern

"This committee undoubtedly appreciates that any proposals for the abolition of commissaries or changes in their operation which may result in a diminution or encroachment upon this so-called fringe benefit is a matter of serious concern not only to all members of the active Armed Forces but also to retired personnel, widows, hospitalized and disabled veterans and others.

"As I have said, we are concerned about the loss of attractiveness of the service as a career. Good management in any private organization faced with the prospect of a declining ability to attract and hold competent personnel would undoubtedly take positive steps to increase the tangible and intangible emoluments it had to offer. As a matter of fact, private industry in recent years has been steadily increasing benefits for its personnel. For the Federal Government to engage in an opposite program within the military, while competing with private business for competent personnel, seems inconsistent with good management practices.

Hook Commission Recalled

"The Hook Commission in commenting on so-called fringe benefits among the services stated, 'It would be unfair and incorrect to state that military personnel do not have certain advantages accruing from these privileges, but it would be equally unfair to maintain that these are more prevalent or far superior to those' (Please turn to Page 1481)

Armistice Agreement a Compromise

SECRETARY of State Dulles flies to Korea this weekend to discuss with President Syngman Rhee matters directly related to the Armistice, upon which wisdom as well as justice compels us to reach a full understanding. Whether by inadvertence or otherwise, some of those matters were apparently agreed to by Dr. Rhee at one time but half-revoked at another, and it is most important that neither he nor the United States have any uncertainty about them. It is important, for example, to distinguish between what is to be sought at the October peace-treaty negotiations, and what is to be insisted upon and, if need be, fought for. We wish a united Korea, for example, but we have not proved able on the battlefield to win from China a united Korea, and it is hardly likely that at the council table China now will lightly yield any such thing, in the "ninety days" that Dr. Rhee speaks of as a limit or in any other finite period. That might, conceivably, prove to be an item for bargaining. We cannot permit Dr. Rhee to regard a "united Korea in 90 days" as a sine qua non of the treaty we seek.

THE ARMISTICE AGREEMENT

reached 27 July was a compromise. This fact has been distressing to a great many Americans who have come to think that any war in which America engages is foreordained to wind up with a complete victory, in which we and our allies face a shattered enemy and exact from him surrender terms of our writing. Realism requires us to recognize regretfully that this time there is no shattered enemy, and the Armistice is primarily a thing of our seeking, and not his. Indeed, two years' experience should convince us, if we need convincing, that the Armistice at last came to being not because we wished it (for we had wished it unsuccessfully for two years and the world knows it), and not because Red China wished it for any humane reasons, but because for her own reasons, political, military, or economic, Red China found it desirable to have a temporary peace.

Alexander in The Philadelphia Bulletin

"MISSION ACCOMPLISHED"

WE CAN CONJECTURE as we like about the activating reasons. Has Russia begun to show reluctance about pouring into the Far East any more materiel, of which immense amounts have been consumed in Korea? Has Red China at length come to regret the loss of so many trained men (as distinguished from mere lives, which to an Oriental mean little)? Has China decided that there is no more to be gained in Korea at this time, and that her resources may be expended more profitably in another theater, in South East Asia for instance? Has China's own internal economy (where crops are extremely bad and local discontent with Communism's performance is reported) begun to worry even Mao and led him to take a breather long enough to improve agriculture and industry? Any or all of these reasons may be present. Or may the wily Orientals, who have fooled us before, again be merely stalling in the hope (curiously like Russia's hopes on occasion) that a taste of peace by the United Nations will produce an appetite for more, in the course of which the United Nations' cooperative spirit will crack up, enabling Red China to resume fighting under more favorable conditions a little later? That, too, is possible, and is recognized as a possibility by General Clark and his various field commanders, all of whom have warned their troops to remain on guard.

IT IS NECESSARY to dwell on all these considerations. Unhappily, many Americans find it unthinkable that there should ever be anything short of absolute victory, and hence any foe except a thoroughly defeated foe. It is necessary, therefore, to recognize firmly that, for whatever reason, we have not forced Red China to surrender and that, accordingly, if we wish peace at all at this time, we must get it by negotiation instead of dictated terms.

This being so, the UN Command, acting for some 21 nations, had its choice among several alternatives, none of them wholly palatable. We could accept a truce by negotiation and compromise (which we did). Or we could continue such defensive fighting as that of the past two years, losing as few lives as possible. Or we could return to all-out war with a grim awareness that it might indeed carry us to the Yalu, but only by sending many more troops and much more materiel to Korea and accepting additional casualties of 40,000 or more. There was no other alternative, and the command judgment was that the first of the four choices was the least unwelcome. To it we now are committed, and time will tell if the decision was best.

THE MAIN CONDITIONS of the lengthy armistice document follow:

- A buffer zone, to eliminate incidents, is created by having the forces of each side withdraw two kilometers, effective within 72 hours of the effective date. (This takes our troops out of reach of such treasured strongpoints as Bunker Hill, Old Baldy, White Horse, Finger and Heartbreak Ridges, Luke the Gook's Castle, et al.). Markers are to be set up promptly by each indicating the demobilization zone.
- The Han River, where each side has controlled one bank, will remain thus neutral, open to passage by both sides.
- No one shall cross the demarcation line without authority, or with arms.
- No hostile act shall be committed in, from, on, or over that zone.
- Each side shall report to the Military Armistice Commission all mines and entanglements within the zone, and shall remove its own hazards within 45 days.
- All coastal islands north of the demarcation line within ten days shall be yielded once more to North Korea, excepting Paengyo-do, Taechong-do, Sochong-do, Yonpyong-do, and U-do. (Cho island, off the west coast, which had been most useful to air pilots, is already being dismantled for evacuation).
- No new military units shall be introduced in Korea by either side, except on a leave basis or on rotation, up to 35,000 individuals a month.

KOREA PIPELINE PROBLEMS will not be eased as much as most people think. Dispatch of thousands of troops from Japan to Korea prior to the Armistice signing means that these men must be rotated after 16 months o'seas duty, instead of 36. Should the Army's 50,000-man Korea Package be eliminated in a short period of time, a tough requirement will develop in the ZI to meet foreign troop shipments.

MARINE CORPS officers and enlisted men (and their families as well) won top-level plaudits last weekend at Quantico, Va. for arrangements made in connection with the Secretaries' Conference. The only foul-up, the belated greeting of the President, was accepted by everyone, particularly the Chief Executive, as "just one of those things." All hands agreed that the weekend provided the Marines with a tremendous opportunity for boosting their inter-departmental prestige and that they made the most of it.

SECDEF WILSON could yet be made correct in his forecast (subsequently much corrected) of a possible monthly draft call dip to 15,000. Asst. SecDef. Hannah, who earned the respect of Pentagon reporters this week for his forthright and expert answers on complicated personnel problems during a lengthy press conference, indicated that monthly inductions probably would run 23,000 until this winter when they might drop to 19,000. He mentioned, however, the close relationship of enlistments to draft call forecasts. During the past several months, as a result of the impending truce and the Air Force's imposing strict enlistment quotas, sign-ups for the Army have zoomed. If the recent rate continues, Army draft calls could drop below 19,000 before the end of the year to meet budgetary ceilings.

RESERVE FORCES POLICY BOARD members now will put strong pressure on the DOD to wrest a decision from the Bureau of the Budget on contract tours for Reservists. Forthcoming release from active duty of Reserve officers by the thousands has stirred the issue. It was just such a "force-out" situation which prompted demands, O.K.'d by Congress, for severance payments to non-Regulars whose tours are short circuited because of budgetary cutbacks. Among the officers who will be forced out, there are certain to be charges of "broken faith" over the forthcoming summary dismissals.

NAVY LEAGUE CONCERN over some aspects of the President's Defense Reorganization Plan doubtless are mollified by appointment of former Asst. SecNav H. Struve Hensel as OSD General Counsel and this week's nomination of Navy Under Sec'y. Charles S. Thomas (a former Navy League official) to be one of the new Asst. Defense Secretaries.

CRACKSHOT COL. Perry D. Swindler, internationally known Army marksman, retires today at Ft. Benning, Ga., for physical disability. The famed rifle and pistol champion ends a career which began with his enlistment in 1919.

ARMY ORDNANCE RESEARCHERS are reexamining types of tires used on military vehicles. There's strong support for slimming tires to improve off-the-road mobility. Some say the narrow high type wheel of the Model T Ford is more efficient than the doughnut Jeep tires.

PROMOTION TO GENERAL of Lt. Gen. Charles L. Bolte, USAREUR C-in-C, may be followed by promotion to three-star rank of the two corps commanders in Germany, Maj. Gen. Ira P. Swift (V), and Maj. Gen. James M. Gavin (VII). Normal rank for a Corps CG outside the ZI is Lt. gen. Speculation that Gen. Bolte would be promoted was disclosed in the 6 June Journal memo.

PRESIDENT EISENHOWER chided the Joint Chiefs—old and new—for their "bashfulness" last weekend at Quantico when they hesitated to step forward boldly for press photographers. It virtually took an order from the Commander-in-Chief to bring the military commanders front and center.

RARE REGRETS were expressed by Gen. Bradley when he informed the President he would be unable to play golf Friday because of a commitment made many weeks previously to attend a First Army reunion in Washington. The Chief Executive nodded understandingly. On Sunday, however, the JCS Chairman and the President got together on the Quantico links.

A 4-STAR SWAGGER STICK was missing during the conference at the MarCorps Schools. The CG there, Lt. Gen. C. B. Cates former USMC Comdt., had his, but reporters spotted Gen. Lemuel C. Shepherd, jr., top man in the Marines, sans swagger stick. It was Gen. Shepherd's recent "authorization and encouragement" that Marine officers carry them which sent swagger stick sales soaring.

THE NEW UMT COMMISSION announced by the President the evening before his departure for Quantico came as a surprise, since SecDef Wilson, asked about UMT at a press conference only two days previously, had given no hint a new study was contemplated. The Secretary has appeared cool to initiation of UMT at the present time on two different press conference occasions.

THE WOMBLE COMMITTEE REPORT on Service attractiveness, though reportedly documented by voluminous material worked up by an inter-Service subcommittee, is not likely to be made public until late Summer or early Fall, unless Dr. Hannah changes his mind. This comes as somewhat of a surprise. Release of the report—or at least extracts from it—had been thought imminent.

NINETY-NINE USN CAPTS. were passed over for a second time by the recent flag board which named 29 officers for star rank; 14 others missed on a third try. Seven (all EDO's and AEDO's) can stay on duty until they have 31 years' service. The remaining 106 will be out in less than a year.

A FISCAL DEFICIENCY is seen a possibility by Navy personnel officials who indicate that enough money may not have been asked for the expanding Reserve program. Before Korea, the Navy had 183,000 Reservists. The figure dropped to a low of 122,000 in Sept. 1952, is now about 140,000 and is expected to reach 152,000 in the next 12 months. The full mobilization plan of the Navy calls for 277,000 Reservists.

NOONTIME SUPPERS have been O.K.'d for MarCorps bases. A Hdqs. message said: "Experience shows noon meals cost approx. 55 per cent total daily ration allowance and most supernumerary rations sold noon meal. Reduced allowance other two meals necessary compensate for losses incurred. To alleviate situation, post commanders authorized approve serving dinner meal in evening and supper meal at noon where necessary."

Armistice Agreement

h. No new materiel, save on a replacement basis approved by the Military Armistice Commission and the Neutral Nations Supervisory Commission, shall be admitted, and then only through the stated ports of entry.

i. Aid shall be given the graves registration service of each side.

j. Naval and air forces as well as ground forces, shall respect the lines drawn.

k. The Military Armistice Commission shall consist of ten senior officers, five from each side (three from each side of general or flag rank) and staff assistants as needed. There will be ten joint observer teams of four to six field officers each. The MAC will see to the carrying out of the armistice terms and report violations, and will meet daily, save that a recess up to one week can be granted by agreement.

l. The Neutral Nations Supervisory Committee shall consist of four senior officers, two named by each side, "neutral" meaning that their nations have not participated in the fighting. The UN has named Sweden and Switzerland. North Korea (really Red China, of course) has named Poland and Czechoslovakia. The NNSC will be assisted by 20 inspection teams each of four field grade officers balanced between the two factions. It will supervise the carrying out of terms, guard the ten ports of entry (five in the north, five in the south), and in particular inspect superficially the equipment being shifted (without the privilege of examining secret parts of the new equipment).

m. Prisoners of War shall be repatriated within 60 days—this actually beginning at the current weekend. It will be accomplished through the Neutral Nations Repatriation Commission (made up of the four neutrals—the latter's representative as chairman), with 50 assistants. The NNPC previously named, plus India will function at Panmunjom, under guard of troops from India. The Commission will be assisted by one 20-man team and two 60-man teams from the Red Cross, representing both sides.

n. Sick and wounded still on the list will have first priority.

o. Prisoners desiring repatriation will be turned over to their nation's representatives without delay. Those declining repatriation will be retained in groups to which "explaining missions" will be sent by the nation affected; the missions will explain their case in the presence of NNRC representatives and one representative from the custodian nation. This "explaining" phase ends in 90 days. After 30 days more the prisoner not desiring repatriation shall be free to go to the country of his choice, assisted by the NNRC and the Red Cross of India.

THE TREATY NEGOTIATIONS still lie ahead, in October. What they will bring to pass is probably known as well to any reader of these remarks as to their writer, or to the United Nations Command. Only the most reckless will forget that the armistice, achieved after two years' palaver, was finally accepted by the Reds (after concessions by both sides) because the Reds wished it, in July, for whatever reason then influenced them. Will that same reason exist in October? Will they stand by their commitments? Will Dr. Rhee? Will the numerous United Nations members? Will events not now foreseen change the whole climate of negotiation? Will there be "incidents" designed to frustrate us? These are all grave questions, whose answers nobody is wise enough to give today. The one certainty is that we will do well to remain watchful, and that is the continuing order of the day.

Discuss Commissaries

frequently obtained in industry.' The Commission commented further that, 'To a large extent, many of these are balanced by the hardships and disadvantages of military life, such as the losses involved in frequent household moves and additional expenses for clothing and equipment.' All servicemen have entered the service with the understanding that existing privileges would be retained during their term of service and upon retirement. It is incumbent upon the Government to fulfill its responsibility in this implied contract. The largest single group affected in this case is the married career enlisted man, the hard core of the military establishment.

"Major Significance"

"When considered alone, the question of commissaries is one of major significance dealing directly as it does with the necessities of life and the ability of the serviceman to maintain his family at a proper standard. Military personnel reside in a particular area by order of the services and do not have the prerogative of quitting and moving on if conditions are bad. The Armed Services require quality in men. To retain to the services this type individual, the military service must be made and kept attractive to him. Many hardships are integral to the military life and are accepted by the individual who elects the military life with the understanding that military perquisites will continue to be available to him. When it now becomes apparent that each of these perquisites is being considered in turn for withdrawal from the military service, the withdrawal of this particular perquisite becomes one of transcending importance because it strikes at the very heart of the military life and the continued effectiveness of the Armed Services.

"There have been expressions of the view that commissary privileges should be limited to personnel living on the military installations, thus denying the use of the commissary to military personnel and their dependents living in the civilian community. I think it fair to point out the fact that the reason so many of our married personnel must live in the civilian communities, be subjected to high rents, etc., is the failure of the government to provide housing on the military installation for more than a small percentage of those eligible for such housing. To deny personnel living off post the privileges of the commissary would be to further penalize those not provided family quarters by the government and to impose a still greater financial hardship on such families.

"In closing I should like to reemphasize the fact that we look upon the commissary as a very important morale consideration in our present efforts to obtain and hold high calibre career personnel, and we most earnestly recommend that no action be taken on this matter which will further reduce the attractiveness of the services as a career."

Lt. Gen. Hickey Retires, Former FEC & UNCC of S

Lt. Gen. Doyle O. Hickey, former Chief of Staff for the Far East and United Nations Command, retired 31 July after more than 35 years active duty.

During retirement ceremonies at Ft. McNair, Washington, D. C., on 30 July, arranged by Maj. Gen. E. K. Wright, Military District of Washington commander, General Hickey reviewed troops of the Third "Old Guard" Infantry commanded by Col. Dennis M. Moore. Both General Wright and Colonel Moore served on the staff with General Hickey in the Far East.

During WW II, General Hickey led the 3d Armored Division in Europe. After the war, he became Chief of the Development Section, Army Field Forces at Ft. Monroe, Va., and in February, 1949, was transferred to the Far East Command as Deputy Chief of Staff. He later was named Chief of Staff and served under Generals MacArthur, Ridgway and Clark.

For his service in Europe, the general was awarded the Distinguished Service Medal, Silver Star Medal with two Oak Leaf Clusters and the Bronze Star Medal with one Oak Leaf Cluster. After his Far East assignment, he was presented with an Oak Leaf Cluster to the Distinguished Service Medal, a third OLC to the Silver Star and the Air Medal. His foreign decorations include the French Legion of Honor and Croix de Guerre with palms and the Belgian Order of Leopold II with palms and Croix de Guerre with palms.

Leaves Memorial Div.

Col. James B. Clearwater, Chief, Memorial Division, Office of The Quartermaster General, will transfer in August to Sharpe General Depot, Lathrop, Calif. He will assume duties there as Commanding Officer.

Navy Lt. Comdr. Eats In Far-Away Places

Lt. Comdr. George H. Whisler, Jr., member of the Air Transport Squadron 31 at the Norfolk Naval Air Station, had breakfast and dinner at home one day recently, but lunched across the nation in San Diego, Calif.

Commander Whisler started off for the West Coast at 5:18 A.M. in a Grumman Cougar jet. After two stops en route, he completed the 2,450 miles in six hours and 36 minutes.

After lunch, he hopped into a Douglas Skyliner and sped home in six and a half hours. He made one stop on the return trip.

Navy Salvage Training

The Navy is inviting applications from officers and enlisted personnel in certain ratings who are interested in becoming Salvage Officers and Salvage Divers.

Eligible for consideration are Line Officers of the Regular Navy and Naval Reserve on active duty in the rank of lieutenant commander and below and enlisted personnel in the following ratings: Boatswain's Mate, Damage Controlman, Machinist Mate, Engineman, Pipe Fitter and Metalsmith. All candidates must have at least 18 months obligated service.

The U. S. Naval School, Salvage, New York Naval Shipyard, (Bayonne Annex), Bayonne, N. J., is the only Naval activity conducting initial training for Salvage Officers and Salvage Divers. The salvage officers course lasts for 14 weeks and provides instruction in all phases of ship salvage, elementary naval design, underwater mechanics and diving. The 16 weeks' course, open to enlisted personnel, offers instruction leading to designation as Salvage Diver.

French "Vest Pocket" Subs Join U. S. Atlantic Fleet

Two French "vest pocket" submarines joined the Atlantic Fleet recently to begin temporary duty on the East coast for the next several months.

The baby U-boats, only 39 feet long and six feet thick, arrived aboard the USS Betelgeuse after a 10-day ocean voyage. Too small to make the Atlantic crossing on their own, the 16-ton submarines were hoisted aboard the Betelgeuse and were ferried as deck cargo.

Sea Duty For Waves

On the eve of the WAVE's eleventh anniversary, celebrated 30 July, the Navy announced that it will call for volunteers from the enlisted women of the hospital corps to fill 63 billets on ships of the Military Sea Transportation Service. The move marks the first time that military billets aboard ships have been opened to enlisted WAVES.

Twenty-four officers of the Navy Nurse Corps will be replaced by the enlisted hospital corps WAVE's on the dependent-carrying MSTs vessels. The nurses will then be available to meet the needs of Navy Hospitals ashore, the Navy said. The remaining Waves will replace male corpsmen.

WAVE hospitalmen and petty officers, other than CPO's, may request the new duty, stating their preference for either the Atlantic or Pacific. Applicants must be at least 21 and must have 24 months to serve. A minimum of two enlisted women will be assigned to each ship, and will be assigned only to ships which have a Navy Nurse aboard.

The tour of duty aboard the ships is 21 months. Of the 63 billets available, 28 are in the Atlantic and 35 in the Pacific.

Cites Naval Supply Depot

The "superior performance" of the Naval Supply Depot at Bayonne, N. J., has been cited by Representative Alfred D. Sieminski (D-N. J.). The Depot is commanded by Capt. Hugh Haynsworth, USN.

In an extension of remarks in the Congressional Record, Representative Sieminski said, "Naval supply depot operations at Bayonne have never been more outstanding."

He complimented Captain Haynsworth and Rear Adm. Murrey L. Royer, Chief of the Bureau of Supplies and Accounts, for working "tirelessly to accomplish this outstanding record."

Despite increased tonnages during fiscal '53 and increased demands within the Navy for individual items, Representative Sieminski said, the work at Bayonne "was accomplished with almost 10 per cent fewer employees." He said, "Not only did fewer employees do more work faster, but total payroll costs were 16.2 per cent less because of work simplification and fewer overtime hours."

He extended the commendation of his "entire constituency" to the command and staff of the Depot.

Reclassify Carriers

The Navy has announced the reclassification of five CVA carriers to CVS. The vessels, which will retain their current hull numbers, are the Enterprise, Franklin, Bunker Hill, Leyte and Antietam.

and ashore. Such specialties include epidemiology, tropical medicine, malaria, laboratory procedures, pathology, photography and photofluorography. In addition the Naval Medical School furnishes laboratory service for the Naval Hospital. The Tissue Bank established in November 1949 is actively engaged in developing and evaluating new methods of preserving human tissue for grafting purposes. Skin, bone and arterial grafts are made available to hospitals having requirements for this material. A pilot blood bank trains medical officers and technicians and provides routine and emergency requirements for whole blood. The Edward Rhodes Stitt Library lists approximately 40,000 medical books, journals and pamphlets and furnishes an excellent reference library for all commands.

A modern diagnostic, treatment and teaching facility is encompassed by the U. S. Naval Dental School. Postgraduate instruction in oral surgery, prosthodontia and maxillofacial prosthesis is afforded naval dental officers and dental intern training together with a reserve officers training program is available to regular and reserve dental officers. The U. S. Naval Dental School collaborates in dental research with the Naval Medical Research Institute.

The U. S. Naval Medical Research Institute conducts research in medical and allied sciences in specialized fields peculiar to the Naval service. It maintains an extensive research program in atomic medicine and shares in joint research studies with other federal laboratories and universities.

The U. S. Naval School of Hospital Administration fills a long-felt need for the Medical Service and Hospital Corps. Training is afforded both officer and enlisted personnel in hospital administration.

The foregoing component commands of the National Naval Medical Center comprise one of the finest medical centers in the world today and provides naval medical installations with unparalleled logistic support in the furtherance of their respective missions of providing the highest type of medical care attainable for Armed Forces personnel.

New Bill Seeks Special Retired Tax Exemption

A bill was introduced this week by Representative Lester Holtzman (D-NY), which would grant a special income tax reduction to all retired personnel of the Armed Services.

Mr. Holtzman's proposal, which has been referred to the Ways and Means Committee, provides that "all amounts up to $2,500 per annum, received as a retirement annuity or pension provided by the United States, any State, any Territory, or any political subdivision thereof, or any agency or instrumentality of any of the foregoing, or by a non-governmental employer shall be excluded from gross income for the purpose of the Internal Revenue Code."

NEW SUMMER UNIFORM. The one-piece shirtwaist dress features a straight skirt accented by a front pleat, with the upper collar and shoulder straps piped in dark green. A garrison cap of the same fabric piped in dark green, and an unlined jacket for more formal wear is designed for the dress. Made of dacron, polyester fiber and nylon, the new uniform for women Marines was designed by Malinbocher and will be optional for two years. It is modeled here by Pfc Vallie Lee Peoples of Camp Lejeune, N. C.

PROTECTING OFFICER'S LIVES

Muzzle-loading rifles would once have been adequate protection. In battle today they would be useless.

An officer depending on such a defense now would be as vulnerable as he would be with life insurance containing a war clause. United Services provides officers, only, world-wide coverage without restrictions.

WWII SC Major Named

George B. Meyer has been appointed manager of the electronics section for aviation products at the Dayton, Ohio, office of Westinghouse Electric Corp.

During WW II, Mr. Meyer was a major in the Signal Corps where, as a project engineer, he helped develop a frequency shift method for teletypewriter operation over radio circuits that is now standard with military and commercial communications.

View Quarter-Ton Vehicles

Army Ordnance Corps officers and Ford Motor Company representatives attended the first presentation and demonstration 27 July of prototype vehicles developed by Ford engineers and the Ford Division's Ordnance Vehicle Project.

The showing to company and military personnel was held at the Ford Engineering Staff Area and Test Track in Dearborn, marking a year of work under a contract with the Detroit Arsenal to design, develop and produce experimental quarter-ton military vehicles.

Military men present included Brig. Gen. Carroll H. Deitrick, Detroit, commander of the Ordnance Tank Automotive Center, Col. R. R. Robins, ranking representative of the Army Field Forces, Ft. Monroe, Va.; and Col. Harold C. Parsons, commander of the Detroit Arsenal.

Gen. Clay Elected

General Lucius D. Clay, USA (ret.), former commander in chief of U. S. Forces in Europe and U. S. Military Governor of Germany, has been elected a director of the American Express Company.

President of Aerojet

Former Secretary of the Navy Dan A. Kimball has been elected President of the Aerojet-General Corp., a subsidiary of the General Tire and Rubber Company.

Mr. Kimball served with the Navy from March 1949 to January 1953 as Assistant Secretary for Air, Under Secretary and Secretary. He previously had served as Vice President of General Tire and Rubber and Executive Vice President of the Aerojet Engineering Corp.

Strato Chambers To Save

Nineteen stratosphere chambers used to test and calibrate aircraft instruments at maintenance and repair depots have been ordered by the Gentile AFB, Ohio, for distribution to AF bases in the U.S. and abroad.

The chambers, by making it possible to check parts on location rather than having to transport them to and from major bases, are expected to speed repair operations and cut costs. The result also will be a decrease in spare parts stocks.

The environmental test chambers, all of the same design, have a temperature range from -75 to 75C. and an altitude range from -1000 to 80,000 feet. Air Force specifications call for specially-engineered features by Tenney Engineering Inc., Newark, N. J., to fit chamber components . . . work space, refrigeration equipment, vacuum pump, instruments, etc. . . into an overall limited space.

Rotary Bomb Door Developed For AF Use

A rotary bomb door that makes a half turn to release its load and eliminates the open bomb bay has been developed by the Glenn L. Martin Company, the Air Research and Development Command announced this week.

The door was developed by Martin engineers experimenting with the Martin XB-51 three-jet tactical bomber. It does away with the necessity of jet bombers having to slow down when approaching a bombing run to prevent buffeting by the wind currents in the open bomb bay.

When in operating position, bombs are carried outside the plane. Once dropped, the door then revolves into normal position. When carrying an unusually heavy load of bombs, explosives can be held both inside and outside the door. After the bombs held externally have been dropped, the door turns over and the inside load is released.

The door can be removed from the plane and, while mounted on wheels, loaded, chocked and fused. When in place and operating, the door creates an opening only when revolving, which eliminates wind buffeting and the need to slow down to acquire a stable platform.

Marines Order New 'Copter

The Marine Corps has ordered a new assault-type helicopter, the S-56, which is being built by the Sikorsky Aircraft Co., Bridgeport, Conn.

Capable of carrying a platoon of men, the 'copter will be powered by two Pratt & Whitney R-2800 engines of 12,000 horsepower each. Tests of the new craft are to be conducted later this year.

The Marine Corps said a 150-200 mile round trip combat mission is believed possible with the S-56 and that this range can be extended with the installation of auxiliary fuel tanks.

Navy Makes Boat Awards

The contracts provide for construction of 25 boats ranging from 40-foot personnel craft to 110-foot sub-chasers.

Three firms, all of which are in the small business category received contracts. The firms, number and type of vessels, and the average unit price are:

Tiverton Boat Yard, Tiverton, R. I., 15 40-foot personnel boats, $15,000.

South Coast Co., Newport Beach, Calif., 3 110-foot sub-chasers (SC), $203,500.

Blanchard Boat Co., Inc., Seattle, Wash., 7 73-foot noise measuring boats, $88,800.

Maj. Gen. Frank A. Heileman, USA-Ret., has been named to the board of directors of Hiller Helicopters, Palo Alto, Calif.

General Heileman, former Army Chief of Transportation, was retired on 30 April.

Col. Merrick To Retire As C.O. At Mitchel AFB After 37 Years

A military career which started 37 years ago on Long Island, N. Y., will come to a close at Mitchel AFB, N. Y., on 31 July when Col. Louis M. Merrick, Mitchel's commander since September 1951, retires from the Air Force.

Colonel Merrick's duties with the Air Force began as a student at Yale University in 1916 when he began flight training on Long Island with the Naval Militia. He will retire as an Air Force command pilot, combat observer and technical observer with more than 7,000 hours flying time in all types of military aircraft.

While serving in Panama with the 24th Pursuit Squadron in 1926, the colonel won the National Fixed Gunnery and Bombing matches for Pursuit Aviation at Langley Air Force Base, Virginia, and was awarded the Distinguished Bombardment and Gunnery Medal by the Chief of Signal Corps. Colonel Merrick was pilot for the Assistant Secretary and the Secretary of Air and War while serving as operations officer at Bolling AFB, Washington, D. C., from 1927 until the early 1930's.

Alaska Survey

The colonel's first tour at Mitchel was in 1938 when he commanded the 18th Reconnaissance Squadron here. In 1939 he was selected as one of a board of officers to recommend selection of Air Force base sites in Alaska and the Aleutian Islands. He piloted an OA-8 for six months throughout remote sections of Alaska and the island chain. Results of the survey were approved and construction immediately started on all bases now occupied by the Air Force in Alaska.

Six years later Colonel Merrick returned to Alaska to command Ladd AFB at Fairbanks, at that time the farthest north Air Force base in the United States Air Force. In 1946 he organized and commanded the Yukon Sector, one of the defense areas of Alaska.

Second Mitchel Tour

Colonel Merrick's second tour of duty at Mitchel was in early 1942 when, after commanding the 22d Bomb Group at Langley Air Force Base he became executive officer of the Bomber Command at Mitchel. He then organized and commanded the Gulf Task Force, directing anti-submarine warfare between Cape Hatteras and the Mexican border, with headquarters at Charleston, South Carolina, and later at Miami, Fla. The colonel then returned to Mitchel as deputy commander, and later as commander, of the First Fighter Command.

Colonel Merrick's fourth tour of duty at Mitchel was from September 1949 until September 1950 when he served on the staff of Continental Air Command headquarters. He served as commander of Air Force Reconnaissance and Troop Carrier Wings in North and South Carolina until he assumed command of Mitchel Air Force Base in September 1951.

After his retirement, Colonel and Mrs. Merrick will reside at their home in Stony Brook, Long Island.

Marines Win Swim Meet

The swimming team from the Marine Corps Air Station, Cherry Point, N. C., took top honors in the Sixth Annual Armed Forces Swimming Meet, held at the Philmont Country Club, Philmont, Pa., on 26 July.

The Marines garnered 68½ points for the championship. Second place went to the Army team from Fort Monmouth, N. J., with 58½ points.

AF Awards Given Gens.

Goddard and Schreuder

Maj. Gen. William F. McKee, Vice Commander of Air Materiel Command, presented medals to two retiring officers this week at Wright-Patterson AFB, O. Brig. Gen. George W. Goddard received the Distinguished Service Medal and the Legion of Merit was awarded to Brig. Gen. Otis B. Schreuder.

General Goddard was cited for his work in the aerial photography field. The award recalled that he was brought back from retirement 1 July 1949 to continue the work which he directed during WW II. By the development of new photographic equipment and techniques, General Goddard has made "a substantial contribution to the future security of this nation and his action reflects the highest credit upon himself and the United States Air Force," the citation read.

General Goddard was stationed at Wright-Patterson for many years as chief of the Photographic Laboratory. He held that position under AMC and under Wright Air Development Center, when the Air Research and Development Command was established. In June 1952, he became director of reconnaissance for the Allied Air Forces in Europe, a position he held until May of this year when he returned to this country for retirement.

General Schreuder was surgeon of all U. S. Air Forces in Europe at the end of WW II. During five and a half years at AMC Headquarters, he guided the AMC's medical service through its formative stages of separation from the Army. The citation that accompanied his medal read:

"As Surgeon of the Air Materiel Command he demonstrated outstanding leadership in directing the Medical Service program, resulting in conservation of manpower. As a result of his superior leadership, the Medical Services of the AMC has an outstanding record of effectiveness and efficiency in every activity."

There were 352 advancements to major, announced in S.O. 147, 27 July, and 45 to captain, reported in S.O. 146, 28 July. All of the promotions to captain were "five per centers."

The promotions to major went through a cut-off date of rank of 31 Dec. 1947 (except for the JAGC, which was 31 Dec. 1948), and also included the "five per centers."

Navy To Convene Six Boards During August

Six Navy selection boards will be convened during August. The first four will meet next week: three on 4 Aug. to name Staff Corps captains for promotion to rear admiral, and one on 11 Aug. to name Line commanders for promotion to captain.

The sixth board will meet on 25 Aug. to name Line lieutenant commanders for promotion to commander.

The Navy said the Staff Corps flag boards will consider officers of the Medical Corps, Supply Corps and Civil Engineer Corps. No board will be convened for Dental Corps officers because "there are no vacancies in flag rank in that Corps," a BuPers spokesman told THE JOURNAL.

Flag Zones

Officers eligible for promotion to rear admiral in the Medical Corps are those senior to Capt. S. J. Ryan (Signal Number 29944). The promotion zone terminates with Capt. Roy F. Cantrell (Signal Number 29706).

Officers eligible for promotion to rear admiral in the Supply Corps are those senior to Capt. A. F. Ryan, jr. (Signal Number 31203). The promotion zone terminates with Capt. C. J. Thro (Signal Number 31142).

Officers eligible for promotion to rear admiral in the Civil Engineer Corps are those senior to Capt. Joseph A. McHenry (Signal Number 34786). The promotion zone terminates with Capt. Charles L. Strain (Signal Number 34757).

Line Zones

The Line board meeting on 11 Aug. will consider commanders with at least five years' service in grade on 30 June 1954 computed from date of rank. The promotion zone terminates with Comdr. E. S. Spangler (Signal Number 2879) in the Regular Register and Comdr. L. J. Perry (Register Number 1016) in the Reserve (1 Apr. 1951) Register.

Reserve officers on active duty will be considered if they reported for their current tour of active duty prior to 1 July 1953.
